Christmas decorations outside

As every house, city gallery and school, dresses up for the upcoming Christmas, the outer spaces want to keep pace with them. Neighbors take part in unwritten competitions for the best decorated garden very often. These who lost promise themselves that next year their yard will look better than the one belonging to the sneaky man next door. Cities are also facing a similar competition. Although there is no contest for the best decorated city yet, more and more funds of their budget are allocated to Christmas decorations outside.

In previous years, it seemed to be enough to invest in a giant Christmas tree and a few illuminations. Nowadays, outdoor Christmas decorations have become a festive attraction that allure locals to walk or tourists to visit some place. Of course, there is no need to explain that it significantly influences the promotion of the city.

It cannot be denied that the most photogenic elements of the exterior design are still huge light illuminations in the shape of a bauble, which you can enter or the sleigh of Santa Claus. However, it is not a foregone conclusion as perhaps this year all eyes will be turned in a completely different direction.

Large baubles are likely to become the hit of Christmas decorations.

Large baubles – the unique Christmas decoration

In search of unusual and original solutions, the TerraChristmas brand decided to choose Christmas decorations that have always appeared in almost every place, in our homes, school buildings, City Halls or town squares. Of course, we are talking about traditional Christmas baubles. Certainly, such outdoor Christmas decorations would not impress anyone, if not for one significant change. Small spheres hooked on coniferous branches were enlarged to the size corresponding to the open space.

Large baubles are as much as 120 cm in diameter, which is 10 times more than traditional balls on a Christmas tree. While quite impressive Christmas tree decorations are 12 cm in diameter, large baubles are up to 120 cm. That is 10 times more! Such a size makes them unsuitable for hanging on a Christmas tree, but they become absolutely an original outdoor Christmas decoration. In addition, we are convinced that they will work just as well on a promenade, market square, in front of a train station or in a shopping mall.

How it's done?

Snowfall, rain, or even hail and ... positive temperatures, and in a moment frost – these are typical weather conditions during the Polish winter. Moreover, there are more difficulties Christmas decorations will encounter. The list should be supplemented with: constant touching by the hands of kids, using them as a shield during a snowball fight, strange ideas of juvenile vandals, as well as being the center of attention throughout the holiday season. Fortunately, the large baubles are resistant to cold and mechanical damage. As a result, they will never break or scratch as easily as their smaller counterparts! What's the secret?

Snow, rain, even hail and... temperatures above zero, and in a moment bitterly cold weather – for all these difficulties the large baubles by TerraChristmas are prepared.

In order to create Christmas decorations outside that would be ready even for the most extreme circumstances, it was necessary to find the right material. It should also be: solid and durable (so that the decoration will last for years), light (the decoration appears only during the holiday season, and the transport of heavy elements generates additional costs), and at the same time allows to obtain a spherical shape. The choice fell on fiberglass, which is used in many industries. The best features are confirmed by the fact that the material from which large baubles are made is also used in aviation, dentistry, fiber optic telecommunications or the production of skis or high jump poles.
